Modern Day Slavery and Trafficking

1. Live Well with Cancer Statement 2026-2027

Live Well with Cancer is committed to acting ethically and with integrity in all areas of our work. Although our organisation is not legally required to produce a Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking Policy under the Modern Slavery Act 2015 due to our turnover being below the reporting threshold, we recognise the importance of taking steps to prevent modern slavery, forced labour, and human trafficking within our organisation and supply chains.

As a community-based charity working closely with the NHS, Northern Cancer Alliance, local partners, volunteers, and suppliers, we are committed to maintaining fair, safe, and respectful working practices. We do not tolerate any form of modern slavery, exploitation, forced labour, or human trafficking.

We aim to:

- Treat all staff, volunteers, and service users with dignity and respect.
- Operate transparent recruitment and employment practices.
- Work with reputable suppliers and partner organisations who share our values and ethical standards.
- Promote safeguarding, equality, and wellbeing across all aspects of our work.
- Raise concerns appropriately where we believe there may be risks of exploitation or abuse.

Our staff and volunteers are encouraged to report any concerns relating to safeguarding, exploitation, or unethical practice, and these concerns will be taken seriously and addressed appropriately.

Live Well with Cancer remains committed to reviewing our policies and practices to ensure we continue to uphold high ethical standards in all areas of our work.
